Southern California moves to 15% water conservation

by Paul Treske

Faced with state water levels reaching historic lows, the Metropolitan Water District (MWD) encompassing most of Southern California, has ordered a move to mandatory 15 percent water conservation as of February 1, 1991. Failure to comply could result in severe penalties to water districts using more than 85 percent of the water they used in the base year, 1989-90.

For the Helix Water District (HWD), already operating at a 10 percent conservation rate, this will mean an additional 5 percent of water savings. HWD General Manager Bob Friedgen is especially anxious for district water users to understand that the increase for residents in the HWD is only 5 percent, rather than what some have interpreted as a 15 percent raise over the existing 10 percent.

Friedgen expects that district residents can and will add to their current efforts to save water, but points out that stricter enforcement may be needed.

"When you go above 10 percent, you need more than rhetoric," he stated.

Friedgen also warns of rate increases in the months to come. He points to the fact that the MWD currently charges Helix $197 per acre foot for water with the San Diego County Water Authority (SDCWA) charging an additional $40 per acre foot. It is anticipated that MWD will raise their rate by $32 on July 1, with the SDCWA adding $15 to theirs. This means a rise in the cost for the HWD of over 7 percent, just to absorb the increase in the cost of water alone. Additional costs involved in delivery will raise the price of water even higher.

Friedgen states that a campaign re-introducing the need for conservation will be initiated with flyers in grocery stores, churches, schools, and even laundromats, targeting all types of consumers. He predicts that a special effort will be aimed at apartment house managers, urging them to install low-flow shower heads and low-flow toilets. He adds that the California Water Authority will be promoting legislation mandating low-water usage fixtures on all real estate transactions in California.

Friedgen also expects the HWD to begin assessment of staffing needs involved in responding to water ordinance violations. Funds have already been included in this year's budget for that purpose.

Community leader leaves Lemon Grove for state capital

One of Lemon Grove's community leaders and law men, David Spizak, will soon leave Lemon Grove and head to the state capital to lend his expertise to the Attorney General's office as a member of the Commission on Police Officer's Standards and Training.

"It's kind of a big shift to leave Lemon Grove," said Spizak, whose family moved to the City in 1950. Spizak has been commuting between Sacramento and Lemon Grove since December, and says he plans to continue commuting for the next six to eight months because his wife and two daughters have strong ties in San Diego.

Spizak participated in a statewide competitive test against 140 other applicants to achieve his new position. "It offered an opportunity to begin a whole new career at this point in my life," he said, while admitting he does regret that it means he has to leave Lemon Grove.

And the City of Lemon Grove will miss him. Not only is he retiring as a San Diego Police Officer, he will be resigning from the Lemon Grove School Board, the Heartland Human Relations Association, the Alcohol & Drug Abuse Prevention Task Force (ADAPT) and the County Advisory Committee on Drug Abuse.

Carol Chubb a fellow Lemon Grove School Board and ADAPT member summed up with, "We're sure going to miss him."

Fyock receives leadership award

Lemon Grove resident Louise Fyock recently received the 10Leadership award for founding Community Connection, a job development and support agency for ex-offenders.

Community Connection, founded in 1985, is a resource center that provides comprehensive supportive and employment services for ex-offenders throughout the San Diego area. The goal of the program is to reduce crime and recidivism by offering effective services crucial for re-entry into the world outside prison walls.

The services offered by Community Connection are: pre-release planning in county, state and federal correctional institutions; assistance and referrals to emergency needs such as shelter food and clothing; community resource information and referrals, employment development and placement; family services; substance abuse programs and ongoing support.

Fyock, who has worked in the field for more than 17 years said, "This is something I definitely feel there is a need for. I believe everyone has the right to change their life and that they are entitled to human dignity."

"There are so many ex-offenders with nowhere to go and no resources when they get out, that it's almost like setting people up for failure."

Community Connection also works within the community to help prevent crime. Community Connection is currently involved in organizing a rally to make El Cajon Boulevard a drug-free zone. Several community events are planned, including a "Boulevard Walk" to publicize the Drug-Free Bill of Rights, a community forum workshop and a recognition reception to honor participating merchants and residents.

Thanks to Fyock and Community Connection, ex-offenders have a chance to re-enter the work force instead of returning to jail.

CalTrans requests residents' input on 125

As a preliminary step to the lengthy process of studying the environmental impacts of the planned Hwy 125/54 segment which will run through Spring Valley and Lemon Grove slated for construction in late 1995, CalTrans is requesting input from area residents.

"The newsletter we recently sent out was to tell the public that we are in the process of studying the thing," said CalTrans Project Manager Mark Leja, about the CalTrans newsletter detailing the environmental reviews which will occur over the next two years.

Included with the newsletter is a "comment" card for residents to write their concerns and issues they would like the environmental studies to address.

"The cards will be summarized and sorted as to the areas of concern, said Leja, explaining that the December 1990 return date for the cards was an error, and the correct deadline for returning the cards is February 2, 1991.

The community will again have a chance to express concerns in writing as part of the final Environmental Impact Report (EIR), which will contain findings of environmental studies as well as the letters of residents.

"We are hoping to have the draft of the EIR by August or September of '91 to circulate for public review, and the final EIR should be out a year later," said Leja.

Scoping meetings, which are a first step in identifying environmental impacts of planned construction, have already been held by CalTrans with public works and planning officials in the County, Lemon Grove, La Mesa and Spring Valley.

Environmental studies are required by state and federal law to address possible impacts to biological resources, historical landmarks and "character" of a community, as well as examine the potential increase of noise and erosion caused by the proposed construction.

In the upcoming weeks, noise consultants working for CalTrans will measure noise levels on the

New vet in Lemon Grove B-Words

Elpidio Quines, DVM

There's a new doctor in town, but he'll only be treating four-legged patients.

Doctor of Veterinary Medicine Elpidio Quines has taken over the practice of Dr. Robert Burns, who retired shortly before the new year. Dr. Quines received his education in veterinary medicine at Araneta University, Institute of Veterinary Medicine in Florida. He then practiced in various veterinary hospitals in Florida and California, with a brief detour at the Zee Veterinary Hospital in Lagos, Nigeria.

He comes to Lemon Grove after working most recently at the Colina Veterinary Hospital in South East San Diego. He said he welcomed the opportunity to purchase his own practice in Lemon Grove because he wanted to work in a more community oriented atmosphere, rather than the busy shopping center atmosphere of the Colina Hospital.

"This was the ideal practice for me," said Quines, who has plans to eventually turn his new practice into a full service hospital with medical services, boarding and grooming. "There's a lot more room here for expansion," he said.

Quines plans to contain the practice established by Dr. Burns of offering low cost spaying, neutering and vaccinations to the community in conjunction with County Animal Control Services.

Quines grew up in the Philippines and is an avid traveler. He and his wife, who is a nurse in La Jolla and helps with the business of end of the new practice, currently live in Mira Mesa. They hope to relocate to Lemon Grove and take an active part in the community once the doctor is settled in his practice.

Military News

Navy Petty Officer 1st Class John R. Hodges, son of Robert F. Hodges of Lemon Grove, was recently commended for outstanding performance of duty and overall dedication while serving aboard the guided missile destroyer, USS Sampson, homeported in Mayport, Fla.

The USS Sampson is currently deployed to the Middle East in support of Operation Desert Shield. Hodges, a 1970 graduate of San Diego High School, joined the Navy in June, 1981.

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

On January 9, 1991, the mailman delivered a newsletter from CalTrans District II, with a map and some explanation of the plans for the new State route 125/54 freeway. A return addressed card was enclosed with the directions that it be returned to Richard Grob, if I "would like my views considered in the environmental studies." The directions were to respond on the card and return it to CalTrans by December 1, 1990. Was this an oversight or was it intentional and truly depicting just how much they value our input?

The first leg will be from Troy Street to Highway 94. The final environmental clearance will be made in late 1992, when the project design and right of way acquisition will begin. This will take until the middle of 1995, when the actual construction is expected to begin. In about the same time frame, the stretches from Troy to Ildica, and Ildica to Jamacha Road will also be done with the entire Lemon Grove segment to be completed in mid-1998. These are the tentative schedules for the edification of the citizens and public officials of Lemon Grove. The map shows the route as beginning with an interchange at Highway 94, a bit to the East of the Sweetwater Road/Broadway intersection. It then travels across Sweetwater Road and runs along its western edge to Jamacha Road, where it leaves our city. The environmental impacts are to be studied over the next twenty months.

The residents of Golden Avenue have become alarmed by talk that the alignment will be wiping out many of those old and beautiful residences. The concerns for wetlands and endangered species are to be addressed. Changes in drainage patterns, community character, impacts on parklands and historical resources also must be considered. Traffic patterns and access routes are important, as the construction and completely highways will affect schools, workplaces and shopping.

The "Views" of the community are ostensibly sought in making these determinations, but the process can be tedious at best, and one would hope that there is no motive other than to get true and complete input. The project that was a rather improbable dream for many years, is now a reality with the passage of Proposition A and the half-cent addition to our sales tax for transportation. The best advice that I can give to everyone that received the newsletter is to mail in the card with your views, no matter what time -limit is stipulated. Also, demand to be put on the mailing list for all of the mailings and notices that are sent out. Everyone in the eastern part of Lemon Grove should be aware and involved in the process of laying out the route. It will affect all of us to some extent, but the Golden Avenue, Crane St. and Palm Junior High area, especially. City Hall is not privileged to a great amount of information, I am sad to say, but what they have is always available to the public. Be watchful, and don't be afraid to ask.

Councilman Bob Burns will address matters of concern to Lemon Grove and its citizens. If you have questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to: PO box BB, Lemon Grove, 91946.

properties of about 60 residents to determine how the additional noise of a freeway will impact various areas, according to Leja.

"We've hired consultants for the noise studies; we give them our preliminary plans and an idea of where the greatest impacts will be throughout the corridor. They go out into the field and get readings of existing noise. We then extrapolate on these measurements to predict the levels of noise with a freeway there," said Leja.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

As I write this, the January 15 deadline in the Middle East has not yet arrived ... but my deadline has. Thus, those reading this on Thursday or Friday will perhaps know already whether it is war or peace ... or something in between.

But as I write this, a phenomenon unique to American history is happening. For the first time in the modern annals of our country, we are waiting for a war/peace deadline which we, not another nation, have set. The hand on the trigger is ours, not that of someone else.

World War I saw us enter a war already three years in progress. World War II started in 1939 with the German invasion of Poland and we were determined to remain out of it until Pearl Harbor removed our options.

Korea started with the invasion of the South by the North Koreans, and our choice was to enter, or not. Similarly, Vietnam was well underway before the painfully gradual enlargement of our role developed. Even in Panama, where the trigger finger was ours, there were no deadlines set ... just sudden invasion.

But now, in January 1991, we have set the deadline and the American people must wait along with our counterparts in Iraq.

It is a most strange time ... something I have never experienced. People around us can talk of nothing but Saddam Hussein and the deadline which seems to have taken on a life of its own, beyond our ability to manage. Events seem to be fueling our engines rather than our own minds and muscles. As humane creatures, we are desperate for peace. We pray for peace and see hope in every shred of news that even remotely suggests a hitch in the inexorable drive of events.

But we are ready for war. The majority of us seem to have accepted its inevitability. We say that events themselves have gone too far, and are now in the saddle. But still we pray.

It is indeed a strange new feeling, waiting for our own deadline to come and pass. It occupies and freezes the mind. There is a potential for so much horror and destruction ahead, and yet we can only wait.

Whatever the outcome, one hopes that out of it may come a kernel of learning that will have made it worth something. This is not the world we planned and foresaw for our children. We are as a nation, divided, angry and, above all, frightened. We like to feel that we are, to some degree, masters of our own fates. History is teaching us that this is not the case. We are left only with the terrible and oppressive weight of helpless fear. Heaven help us all.

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges

A Superstar on the rise

Fame and success are roaring down the track at Phil Mickelson a full 18 months before he wants to climb aboard. Phil, a four-year varsity star at University High in San Diego, and a three-time San Diego Junior Player of the Year, is a junior at Arizona State University and has plans to play collegiate golf for three more semesters.

He went out to play in the Tucson Open last week to gain a little professional tournament experience, but something funny happened to him on his way to the final hole. The likeable 20-year-old San Diegan mastered his game and the course, to win the first regular PGA tournament of the year. And, he did it in championship style - despite a triple-bogey on the 14th hole.

Most triple-bogey scoring golfers would have eaten their crying towels, thrown their clubs into the desert and stood sobbing with shoulders slumped in total surrender on the following tee.

Not Phil Mickelson. He's made of sterner stuff.

"My dad always told me that your going to have a bad hole in almost any round, but to keep going. You never know what's going to happen," Mickelson told reporters after his fabulous finish.

Phil won the tournament, but he had to pass up the $180,000 cash prize to keep his amateur (and collegiate) status. That also takes a considerable amount of character.

"He could change his mind, but if he decides to stay in school, he'll stay in school," said Norrie West, executive director of the San Diego County Junior Golf Association.

Phil's dad, Phil Sr., began teaching his son the game when he was about two. Young Phil mirrored, from the left side, his dad's right-handed swing. Phil does everything right-handed, except play golf.

West checked the records in his La Mesa home office and counted Mickelson's junior tourney victories.

"He won the 10 and under Junior World title in 1980. He played in 162 Junior tournaments and won an amazing 30 of them. He didn't really hit his stride until he was about 15. Then he won three straight San Diego County Junior Player of the Year awards.

Phil is the two-time defending NCAA champion and the current U.S. Amateur champion. He has been invited to play in the San Diego Shearson Lehman Open, the Phoenix Open, Miami's Doral Open and as the reigning U.S. Amateur champion, he has entry into the Master's Tournament, the U.S. Open and the British Open. As the Tucson winner, he'll be invited to La Costa for the Infiniti Tournament of Champions next January.

That's a lot of distraction for a college kid. But those who know Phil share the feeling he'll handle it in championship style.

"Phil has great confidence in himself and his game," says West. "He's remarkable, but you get used to that with Phil." PGA star Craig Stadler looks at Phil's play another way: "I'd like him to stay in school another eight or nine years," he says.

A real cool sport

Following a water-soaked summer from constant swimming and water-skiing in one of the beautiful lakes in the "Land of 10,000 Lakes," it was then on to the upcoming winter sports. Although the weather outside was "frightful," us Swedes from Minnesota made the very best of it.

Planks, stakes and light poles were made ready on shore anxiously waiting for the lake to freeze over, usually in November. The warming house was a permanent fixture on the lake's edge, as close to the proposed skating and ice hockey rink as possible.

As soon as the rink was enclosed in 2 x 12 sideboards and the poles were frozen-in for the lights, it was skating all day, and well into the night. I played "sand lot" hockey every waking hour until I qualified for the semi-pro "Lake Conference Team." The center and wings were always very agile skaters, but the defense men, or guards, just had to be big and tough, for which I was amply qualified. If an opponent made it to our end of the rink, my partner defense man and I would try to crush the skater between us.

In those days, body protection equipment was either too expensive or hadn't even been invented yet. My only protection was old magazines stuffed in my heavy skating socks to protect my shins - the most vulnerable spot.

I played this rough sport until one day my wife said, "Your always so beat up after the game that you can't even go to work the next day. So Quit!" So I quit and went to war, a much less hazardous pastime. With the "Big One" over, it was back to a quiet civilian life and a new winter sport.

We moved to Duluth, Minnesota, which has winter blasts to make Chicago, "The Windy City," seem like the tropics. It was there that I joined in a new and less disabling winter pastime, "curling." The game is played on ice in the form of a bowling alley. Huge round "rocks," about a foot across, are slid down the lane like shuffleboard.

Each team had three or four players, including a boss called a "skip," who directed the others. After the rock was slid down the lane, one or two of the men swept the ice ahead of the rock with real brooms. The fast sweeping seemed to guide the rock to its proper position on the bull's eye.

The sport of curling originated in Scotland, and has all the Scottish flavor. Each league has parties at the end of the season known as "bashes." They drink Scotch until their kilts start to tilt.

Curling isn't as exciting or crippling as ice hockey, but it is "cool."

Joe Freed on the Movies

This Week's movie: The Grifters and three more...

The Grifters

John Cusak ("Say Anything"), Angelica Huston ("The Witches"), and Annette Bening ("Valmont") star in this sly, dark comedy about three con artists (or grifters) caught in a triangle of money, sex and violence. The first film in release by Martin Scorsese's new production company, "The Grifters" is directed by Stephen Frears, whose last film, "Dangerous Liaisons," was nominated for seven Academy Awards.

Based on the novel by Jim Thompson, the movie follows the lives of Roy, a small-time con man, Lily, his estranged mother, and Myra, Roy's girlfriend, who is out for the big-time grift. Each has their own idea of success, and when ambitions overlap, they must face the violent consequences of deceit.

Director Frears develops the story with a mixture of seduction and treachery, and within this homage to the moody thrillers of the 1940s and '50s, he brings out the very best in his cast. Cusak is both affecting and comical as Roy, who is somehow too boyish to pull off his tough-guy image. Huston's portrayal of Lily is excellent in its complexity -- confident and cocky, yet always fearful. And, I think Annette Bening is going to be an important actress for the '90s; not only is she beautiful, but crafty and very entertaining.

It may be slightly strange and definitely quirky, but "The Grifters" is also a masterful tale of greed and ambition.

Flight of the Intruder

What's going on? I can't believe Danny Glover and Willem Dafoe would do this to themselves. They're both good actors, and I don't think either one is on the verge of bankruptcy. So, why would they agree to make a movie that has no plot, cashes in on every over-used Vietnam cliché in the book, and is essentially three "neat-o" flight scenes linked together by a few lines of awful dialogue?

Set in North Vietnam in 1972, it's the story of three Naval heroes. Glover is the squadron leader, Dafoe is the bombardier, and Brad Johnson ("Always") is the pilot. Everybody with me? Good. Because if you understand that, you basically got a grasp on the entire plot; three guys go to war.

Sure, there are little vignettes in between explosions. Soldiers go into town to buy women, drink booze, and beat each other up ... originality in its purest form. There's even an attempt at a serious romantic interlude between Johnson and Rosanna Arquette, but its pretty embarrassing.

The only people who are going to benefit from "Flight of the Intruder" are Mark Vargo and some of the people at George Lucas's Industrial Light and Magic, who created some quality special effects. Unfortunately, their work was the only good thing about the film.

Hamlet

OK, I'll give Mel Gibson points for trying. I guess I just can't accept him as a serious actor anymore. In the early days, before Mel's corruption, I would have embraced such an endeavor. That's when he was making good films like "Gallipoli," "The Bounty," and the original "Mad Max." Then, Mel made two

"Road Warriors," two "Lethal Weapons," and the incredibly inane, "Bird on a Wire," and "Air America." After watching the wide-eyed, nearly crazed hero of those drive-in dramas, I cannot watch Mel try to pull off "Hamlet" without a smile and a snicker. I know it isn't fair, but what can you do?

Other than that, the scenery is great, and all the other actors do well, especially Ian Holm as Polonius and Helena Bonham-Carter as Ophelia.

Not Without My Daughter

Based on the true story of Betty Mahmoody, Sally Field stars in a drama about a American woman who takes a vacation to Iran with her Iranian husband. At the end of their stay, however, her husband decides to re-embrace Islam, refusing to allow Betty and their daughter to return to the United States. Captive in a land hostile to Americans, Betty plans a dangerous escape, fighting to regain her freedom.

Conveniently timely and well-crafted, director Brian Gilbert's film is a thrilling look at another culture, and its concepts of family and treatment of women. Written by David Rintels from a book by Betty Mahmoody herself, "Not Without My Daughter" is a powerful drama, thanks to Sally Field's fine acting abilities.

I do fault the movie, however, for its shameless Americanism. I understand the importance of dealing with the extremes in cultures, but shots of an American flag flapping in the wind accompanied by melodramatic music, was a bit much.

Save the Earthlings

By Joseph Walker

One of the things I'm going to remember about 1990 is the way environmental awareness increased. Who could forget Earth Day, with millions of people celebrating Mother Earth at concerts, rallies and festivals all around the world? Wasn't it comforting to know that so many people are totally committed to making this planet a better, safer, cleaner place on which to live?

OK, OK -- so maybe it took sanitation workers a while to dig out from under all the trash Earth Day revelers left behind. They still made their point. I've been taking three-minute showers ever since.

And feeling good about it. If not more hygienic.

The Earth Day message got through to my family, too. Suddenly I've got all these little environmentalists running around the house, waxing eloquent about the ozone layer, debating the merits of shifting from disposable to cloth diapers for the baby and recycling the garbage. (They're still not very excited about taking the garbage out. But they will dig in up to their elbows to recycle it).

And that set me to thinking: what if we could drum up this much enthusiasm for cleaning up the social environment in which we live?

John Javna wrote a nifty little book which has since become sort of a handbook for do-it-yourself environmentalists. It's called "50 Simple Things You Can Do to Help Save the Earth." For this new movement of social environmentalism, I offer (with a tip of the hat to Javna) "10 Simple Things You Can Do to Help Save the Earthlings."

1. Recycle Kindness. When someone does something nice for you, consider it a challenge to do something nice for someone else. And when someone is mean to you, repay them with kindness (Trust me, it's the best reaction. You'll be surprised how much a little kindness can improve a relationship. And even if it doesn't, you'll have the satisfaction of driving the other person absolutely nuts. Either way, you win).

2. Plant a Kiss. Preferably, on someone you love. Or at least, know.

3. Conserve Water. Help dry a neighbor's tear.

4. Stop Air Pollution. Stifle those hurtful, discouraging words. And if you simply must get them out of your system, write them down on a piece of paper and then rip it into tiny bits (you can even throw them on the ground and stomp around on them if you want to). It'll make you feel better without having anyone else feel worse (oh, and don't forget to clean up those paper bits -- for recycling, of course).

5. Consume Less. Especially things that hurt you and other people around you. You're doing yourself a favor if you eliminate tobacco, alcohol and drug abuse from your life. And I promise, the world will seem a sweeter, more pleasant place. Eventually.

6. Get Tough on Polluters. Refuse to watch television programs or movies that waste your time, drain your energy and make your brain go limp.

7. Don't Use Plastic. If you can't afford to pull out the green stuff when the cashier asks, "Will that be cash or charge?" -- do without. Indebtedness can be devastating to your social health, and it's never as easy to eliminate as you think it's going to be. Just ask President Bush.

8. Study Global Warming. And learn from it. As the world warms to democracy, maybe we should warm to the rest of the world. If we all became a little more tolerant of other people and their customs, religions and definitions of the word "football," maybe we wouldn't have to worry so much about defending ourselves against prejudice and the ultimate Greenhouse Effect: nuclear conflict.

9. Garden Organically. But keep the ol' compost pit in the yard where it belongs. No need to allow the stuff to pile up in the middle of your personal or professional relationships, where all it'll fertilize is uncertainty and mistrust. Be open, honest and candid, and let the "chips" fall where they may. So to speak.

10. Take a Stand. You'll be surprised to find out how invigorating it can be to stand up for something you really believe in. Of course, first you have to decide what that "something" is -- which can be an exciting adventure all by itself.

So, there you have it; "10 Simple Things you Can Do to Save the Earthlings."

Let's give it a shot. And, who knows? Maybe we can follow up Earth Day 1990 with something even better -- Peace on Earth Day, 1991.

Bridal Fair proves educational and enlightening to future brides

by Cynthia O'Neill

On Sunday, January 13, when men parked themselves in front of the television set for the playoff games, the women did not complain.

Instead, they headed straight for the 3rd Annual La Mesa Bridal Fair at the La Mesa Recreation Center. Brides-to-be and their mothers sipped champagne while chatting with florists, caterers, photographers and bridal gown designers. Harpists strummed soft chords in the balloon-bedecked center, while outside, the Classical Jazz Band sent toes to tapping.

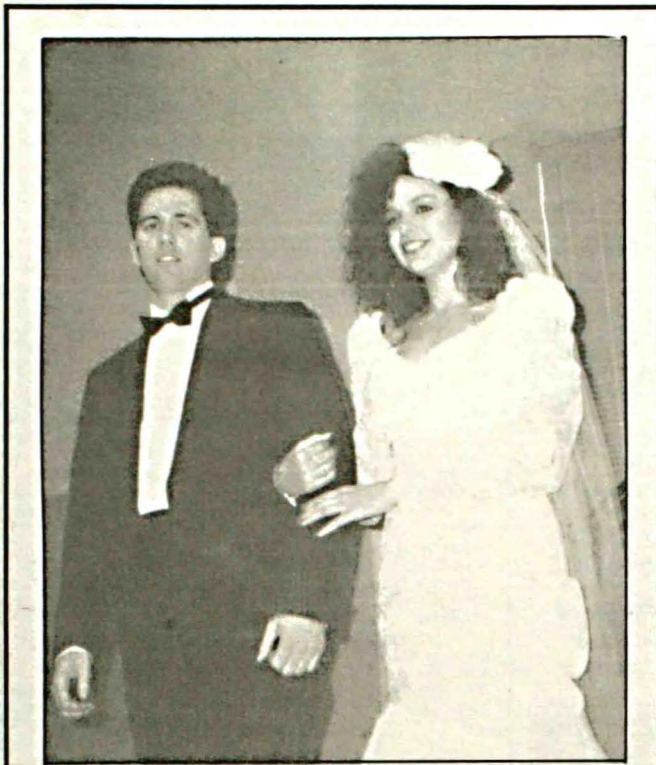

Very special young ladies of La Mesa modeled in the three fashion shows of the Fair. Kellie Cando, Miss La Mesa 1989 looked picture-book lovely in a teal bridesmaid dress from Fashion Exchange Resale of La Mesa. Miss La Mesa 1990, Jervan Marino, graced the audience with her billowing white gown and cathedral-length train from Just Darling of La Mesa.

Jean Comstock of the Fashion Exchange Resale Shop believes that, though colors and styles of wedding dresses change each season, a wedding is a very individual thing, and there really is no wrong dress or color for the bride. "Often, the bride wants to wear her mother's wedding dress or something similar. We are able to offer her some choices."

The look for weddings this year is, as always, dreamy, but with more detail such as beads, sparkles and lots of lace.

Nearly every girl has dreamed of walking down the aisle in a dress as spectacular as that worn by Julie Andrews in the movie, "The Sound of Music," but expense and impracticality may overwhelm the bride.

Yet, romance and beauty may still be had in the more understated bridal gown, which Marino proved as she modeled a soft, full-skirted knee-length dress, fit

From all over the country, brides-to-be flocked to the Fair.

Denise Daughtery of Tierrasanta, whose wedding date is February 16, taste-tested the hors d'oeuvres from Country Comfort Catering Of Spring Valley.

"I'm having 60 to 80 people in my wedding," she said, "and I am still making last-minute decisions. This fair has helped."

Andrea Eidsmore from Santee filled out a form for a prize drawing from Kappy's Ltd. Florist Studio. Her wedding is scheduled for March.

She found out about the Fair from her mother, who came into La Mesa one day for shopping, and saw the sign outside the Recreation Center.

"I've been to the Modern Bride Fair," said Eidsmore, "this one has more exhibitors and at a more reasonable cost; I'm glad I came."

When Lisbet's Lingerie of La Mesa began its fashion show, the few men in attendance of the event watched with interest alongside their brides-to-be. Black, red or white are still the favorite colors in intimate wear for ladies. The lingerie featured by Lisbet's was discreet and comfortable-looking.

Looking through an album of wedding work by Alinda's Flowers of La Mesa was Halle Kingsland from La Jolla.

"My boyfriend lives in Turkey," she said, "we met five years ago, and we've been engaged three and a half years. I have a good idea what my dress is going to look like for the wedding, but I still have to think about things like the colors and the flowers."

"The tentative wedding date is June 1 of this year."

At 3 p.m., the Fair was still busy with patrons.

It's Girl Scout Cookie time again

Beginning January 26, Lemon Grove residents will once again have a chance to help make a Girl Scout's dream come true when they help support San Diego-Imperial Girl Scout Council's 1991 cookie sale.

Advance orders for the seven varieties of Girl Scout cookies will be taken until February 4. Each box is $2.50, and delivery on orders taken at this time, will be made between February 23 and March 11. Between March 1 and 11, there will be various cookie booth sales in the area, so you will have plenty of chances to stock up on these cookies, as they come once a year.

The varieties available are: Peanut butter patties, caramel delights, lemon pastry cremes, shortbread, thin mints, peanut butter sandwiches and "golden yangles" (bite-size cheese crackers).

For each box of cookies sold in this area, a troop or group of girls will receive 30 cents to support local projects and activities, and the Council will have $1.41 to make an increasing number of opportunities and activities available to nearly 30,000 local girls.

All monies raised from cookie sales will benefit girls in San Diego and Imperial Counties. This year's goal is to sell 2,000,000 boxes. Last year, just under this amount was sold. With your help, this goal can be reached.

Mt. Vernon, Golden Ave., Monterey Heights, St. John of the Cross, San Miguel and San Altos elementary Schools all have Girl Scouts who will be making the rounds in their neighborhoods.
